Dear Fly Fisher

We hope you enjoy this newsletter update giving some ideas for fly fishing trips for 2014 and 2015. Please do not hesitate to be in touch with Fly Fisher Group for the insider advice needed to get the very best out of your fly fishing holiday.

Looking back over the past year, we have seen some truly exceptional fishing in salt and fresh water. Alphonse Island has excelled not only in terms of the fishery itself but also the on island management, staff and service have risen to a new level, making the perfect mix of prolific fly fishery, relaxing holiday and remote island paradise.

Iceland enjoyed a spectacular 2013! High, cool water, periodic rain and very decent runs led to productive trips at Laxa in Kjos, Langa, Nordura, Midfjardara, Hafralonsa, Hofsa, Vesturdalsa, Svalbardsa and many other rivers. We expect another great season in 2014.

We also wish to thank our Yokanga fishers who in 2013 allowed us our first ever 100% full season at the Yokanga Lodge. Fishing was reliably good and although less fish over 30lbs than the exceptional 2012 season provided, the quality of quantity of salmon especially deep, maiden hens in the 18-25lb class was something to be beheld.

Keep an eye on the www.flyfishergroup.com website for Yokanga and Iceland catch reports during the 2014 summer. You will also find trip reports from Argentina, Cuba, BC and a host of other destinations FFG believe deserve to be experienced.

CONSOLIDATION OF COMPANIES INTO FLY FISHER GROUP

Some of you may have noticed that we are now trading under the name Fly Fisher Group. The company has grown organically since 2006 and we have previously used the names Fly Fish Iceland, Fly Fish Yokanga, Fly Fish Seychelles and Fly Fisher Travel. We are pleased to announce that we are now one entity, Fly Fisher Group Limited. This consolidation makes the company one of the leading players in the UK. Significantly, the three individuals who run the company are co-owners and are fully employed in arranging sporting holidays for clients. For your reassurance, Fly Fisher Group Limited carries full tour operator liability insurance and our air package holidays are protected by ATOL licence 10050.

A fish of a lifetime is a possibility in any week

Yokanga lodge in the evening sun

Yokanga, on Russia's Kola Peninsula, is famous as one of the very best places for catching the Atlantic salmon of a lifetime. This river's huge fish are well documented and the daily and weekly catch statistics for each season are published on the Fly Fisher Group website for all to see. Do take a look, as the numbers speak for themselves.

While the prime, mid, and late June weeks on Yokanga are well known for producing some of the largest fresh salmon, for those in the know, the last three weeks of the Yokanga season arguably offer the best value of all.

Mid and late July salmon over 30lbs may not be as fresh as earlier in the season but there is every chance of encountering a fish of that size right until the last week. Fresh salmon over 20lbs are routinely landed throughout July and unlike many other northern Kola rivers, Yokanga is blessed with a consistent run of fresh 5lbs to 15lbs fish stretching well into August.

The later weeks on Yokanga offer a well-priced high-quality experience where guests can expect to land a couple of fish each per day and are always in with the chance of hooking a fish of a lifetime.

GREMINKHA CAMP, LOWER YOKANGA

Back by popular demand!

Probably the most physically and technically demanding Atlantic salmon fishing there is! Gremikha Camp fishes the lowest, most rugged 8kms of the Yokanga. With an extensive walking programme, June fishers can intercept Yokanga's huge salmon fresh off the tide.

The Gremikha Camp has wooden-floored twin and single tents. The camp and guide team are ready to welcome those who are up for the challenge.

Fly Fisher Group IN THE SEYCHELLES

ALPHONSE ISLAND

including St François Atoll

St François is one of the three Alphonse group atolls and is where Alphonse fly fishing guests actually fish on a daily basis. This uninhabited, undeveloped marine paradise remains the best place for diverse and productive waded flats fishing. The numbers of bonefish that it is possible to land is simply without equal and once guests have had their fill of bonefish then there are numerous other species to target.

There is something for everyone when fishing from Alphonse. First-time saltwater fishers can be assured of success with plenty of bonefish that are less spooky than in other destinations. Hardened saltwater enthusiasts can target tailing bones, larger fish or chase more fussy feeders, such as the bizarre looking triggerfish or elusive pompano.

One of the major advantages of Alphonse is that the majority of the fishing is done by wading. This means that when sharing a guide, both rods can be fishing at the same time rather than taking it in turns from a skiff as is the case at some other bonefishing destinations. The water is crystal clear and the sand is very white and firm which makes walking and spotting fish relatively straightforward. It is generally only at certain tide phases, or when it is decided to try for milkfish or larger predatory species, that the skiffs are used.

The owners of Desroches Island took over the management of Alphonse Island from 2012/2013 season. We believe this is great news and will secure the future for fishing from the island. The owners are experienced in running a first-class, small resort and have a fishing manager with a strong track record.

Any redevelopment of the island is on hold making it suitable for non-fishers once again. Guests will stay in the much loved and very comfortable ensuite, A-frame chalets. There will be a maximum of 12 rods fly fishing St François and there is also a blue water boat once again for those who would like to take it to try for a sailfish or other offshore species on the fly.

Alphonse remains one of the very best venues for saltwater fly fishing. Please contact us now for availability and a suggested itinerary.

DESROCHES ISLAND

with fishing also at Poivre and St Joseph Atolls

Desroches Island is 6kms long and has just one luxurious resort hotel. The hotel guests have the run of the island and its fabulous 14kms of pure white, sandy beaches.

Desroches is an ideal destination for fishermen travelling with non-fishing partners or family and preferring to fish for just part of a week. There are a range of superb rooms from which to choose. The Beach Suites are the most affordable and come with a private deck, lounge area and outdoor bath and showers. The Luxury Beach Suites are a step up covering 125 square metres and boast their own private plunge pool, plus there are a wide selection of stunning villas for families or larger groups.

Desroches is surrounded by a 38kms ring of sunken coral atolls and with sheer drop-offs it is teeming with both pelagic and reef fish. In addition to the blue water fishing available immediately around Desroches Island, there is high-quality flats fly fishing on the St Joseph and Poivre atolls. They offer excellent fishing for bonefish and pompano, the Indo-Pacific permit.

We highly recommend doing a few days' offshore fishing (there are boats available) and combining it with a few days flats fishing. Species that can be caught include sailfish, dogtooth tuna, yellowfin tuna and wahoo.

There are no fixed arrival or departure days and the island is served with daily flights from Mahe. With a mixture of flats and offshore fishing, we can create an itinerary to suit both fishermen and those that prefer a relaxing sunny holiday.

Fly Fisher Group IN ICELAND

Our in-depth knowledge and operational experience of rivers in Iceland makes it a key destination for Fly Fisher Group. Below we highlight some of the rivers our clients have enjoyed in recent seasons.

LAXA IN KJOS

This conveniently-located west coast river is just an hour and a quarter from the international airport. The fishing extends to 25kms and includes the intimate Bugda tributary. There are 90 named pools varying from tranquil meadow sections to faster flowing falls pools in mountainous scenery. The 10-year catch average is 1,171 for the 10 rods. The lodge is one of the more comfortable in Iceland.

LANGA

Langa has classic Icelandic salmon fishing with clear water and pools that are easily covered with a single-handed rod. Significantly the lake at the head of the river is used to regulate water to the river, mitigating the risk of low water. The 10-year catch average for the 12 rods is 1,683.

NORDURA

The 10-year average is in excess of 2,000 salmon and a record year of 3,307 makes Nordura a top choice for reliably prolific fishing. The fishing is 55km of excellent fly water with over 150 named pools. Clear water means the fishing is diverse and the scenery dramatic. The lodge has twin-bedded rooms with ensuite bathrooms with showers and is located in a beautiful position overlooking the falls pool and the food is of excellent quality.

MIDFJARDARA

When fishing this north west river, there is huge variety as the fishing also includes the Austura, Vestura and Nupsa tributaries. One of the features of this river is that it produces a good number of multi-sea winter salmon and a strong run of grilse. Midfjardara has seen some tremendous seasons in recent years, twice producing more than 4,000 salmon. The 10-year catch average is more than 2,000 to the 10 rods.

HAFRALONSA

The rugged countryside and, at times, turbulent sections of the Hafralonsa make for unique fishing in beautiful scenery. Like other rivers in the north east, the Hafralonsa is characterised by a high proportion of larger salmon as opposed to grilse. Recent catch and release efforts have shown marked improvements in annual catches. Together with increasing parr densities, this has excited the Icelandic Institute of Freshwater Fisheries about this remote river's future. Hafralonsa is fished from a rustic, but comfortable, six-bedroom lodge.

SVALBARDSA

This is a miniature version of the Hafralonsa in many ways. Dramatic scenery and a manageable river, the Svalbardsa has good numbers of salmon and catch and release throughout recent seasons has meant substantial improvements in the annual catches. As a result, space is extremely hard to come by. The 10-year catch average is 340 fish to just three rods.

HOFSA

Arguably one of the most famous of Icelandic rivers, the Hofsa is justifiably regarded as one of the top rivers. The 30kms of water is fished by seven rods on seven lengthy and varied beats. Each beat has up to six good sized pools. Unlike other rivers in the north east, the Hofsa has easy wading and good vehicle access, other than the adventurous uppermost beat but this access will be greatly improved for the 2013 season. As of 2012, the lodge has been refurbished with each rod now having their own bedroom and ensuite bathroom. The 10-year catch average is 1,320.

LAXA IN ASUM

Laxa in Asum has always been renowned for its run of salmon and total privacy which has resulted in some famous regular clients. The new leaseholders have built an impeccable new lodge and the guiding, food and service are second to none. Asum salmon are famous for their supremely aggressive takes and the tenacity with which they fight. The Asum has fishing over 14kms of water on 30 pools, which is more than can be covered in a day. The fishing can be prolific with years producing in excess of 1,500 salmon but a more normal average is 540 fish. The lodge and river are to be taken privately for up to four people fishing the two rods.

Fly Fisher Group IN ARGENTINA

A cast and blast from the past by Peter Rippin

In December 1996, tempted by the promise of a four month adventure, I embarked for Rio Gallegos, Argentina.

For three northern hemisphere winters, myself and five other guides, spent Christmas at Estancia José Menendez, fishing the waters of Villa Maria and Kau Tapen on the Rio Grande, before heading across the Straits of Magellan to the Rio Gallegos to guide small groups of clients. During this time I developed a deep respect for this ever-changing and massive landscape. Although harsh and empty to some, it will always be dramatic and breathtaking to me.

2012 was a great spring for me, returning for yet another time to Alphonse Island and finally getting back to the Rio Grande with a group of clients. The fishing and company were fantastic. We had gone in late March, quite late in the season, but we had a great week. The evening sessions were the really special ones for me. There is no fly fishing anywhere else on earth like it.

There is not much to be seen at first, then as the light softens, there are the first swirls and small splashes as the fish make themselves known. Not the lightweight ripples of school peel or finnoch but the meaningful displacement of volumes of water that signify fish anywhere from 5lbs to 20lbs plus. The more the evening closes in, the more exciting it gets. In the half light, every minute movement of water is deafeningly loud and the aggressive jolts of the line pulling away as a sea trout takes are electrifying.

Our group averaged 15 sea trout each, the best a 26lber, one of four fish over 20lbs. Fish in the teens were quite commonplace. Kau Tapen is every bit as comfortable and well thought out as its legend suggests and the service is first-class.

For one of the party, the real lure of Argentina was not fishing but the preceding two days' dove shooting in Cordoba. Having arrived at Cordoba airport we went directly to the shooting. As we settled in for what we thought would be an hour's gentle introduction before dinner, it was impossible not to notice two things. Firstly the sheer volume of doves flying down the valley from the hills and secondly the slabs of cartridges the bird boys were putting into each of our hides. Having never done it before, it proved to be way more fun, varied and challenging than I had ever thought possible.

Fly Fisher Group IN NORWAY

OLDERO LODGE, LAKSELVA

Norway has long been known for its large Atlantic salmon, but the problem has always been finding the right combination of river privacy and catches. The Lakselva, right in the north of country and only a short hop from the famous Alta, is an absolute gem that is producing some very large salmon and we can confidently recommend Oldero Lodge as the best on the river.

It is important to understand that fishing in Norway is often run differently to many salmon fishing destinations. Lakselva is mostly fished by those who have a day ticket on one of four different beats. There are, however, some sections on the river, which are leased or owned separately which is where Oldero Lodge comes in. This four-rod lodge, set on an island just a couple of miles from the river mouth, both privately leases stretches of water and owns its own private water.

The key to Oldero's desirability is that the stretches of water it leases or owns, have among the very best pools on the river. Not only that, these pools are known as the big fish producers. The famous Swimming Pool is not only known for guests taking an unexpected dip, but also because it produces some seriously big salmon. Not just 20lb and 30lb but salmon up to and beyond 50lb.

Oldero owns the only double-banked stretch of water on the whole river, which is strategically the first stopping off point from the sea. As well as holding residents, there is always a steady push of fresh fish on each tide. Most significantly this prolific pool is Oldero's Home Pool and is only a two-minute stroll from the lodge.

The attraction of the river is that it does not require hairy wading or fishing from a boat all day. Instead it is a relatively small and tranquil river easily fished with a 12 to 14 foot rod. With clear water it is well-suited to floating line fishing and at first glance you would not believe it possible that a river like this could produce genuinely huge salmon.

Mission Lodge, Alaska

Fly Fisher Group IN ALASKA

There is an enormous variety of fishing and lodges available in Alaska. It includes float-trips, where you stay in comfortable camps every night and fixed lodges, which range from semi-permanent tented structures to five star lodges. Here we focus on two of the best lodges, which specialise in flyout fishing.

BRISTOL BAY LODGE

This is one of Alaska's most well-established and respected lodges. The amount of returning clients speaks volumes about the outstanding job they do both at the lodge and in arranging a classic, Alaskan fishing experience.

The great advantage of a flyout lodge is that you use a float plane, in this case de Havilland Beavers, to access different water each day. They operate a fixed fishing rotation, which includes one, and sometimes two, nights at one of the lodge's remote outpost camps. For many, this is the highlight of their week at Bristol Bay Lodge and a unique element to the fishing experience.

Guests have a varied and productive fishing experience during the three month season, targeting the five Pacific salmon species and rainbow trout.

MISSION LODGE

Situated the other end of Lake Aleknagik to Bristol Bay Lodge, Mission Lodge is run to the same high standards and also offers daily flyout fishing.

The difference at Mission Lodge is that they run a flexible fishing schedule. Each evening, guests can decide what they would like to do the following day. There is a huge choice of water to fish with the lodge having more than 40 boats that they station throughout the region.

The lodge itself is an impressive structure that overlooks Lake Aleknagik. Mission Lodge is one of only a few lodges where all guests have a single room, with a bathroom shared between two rooms.

Fly Fisher Group IN CUBA

For a couple of seasons, the principal operator on the south cost of Cuba has been pioneering a new fishery on the fringes of the now famous Jardines de la Reina. South Ana Maria, as it is known, offers some of the best value for money fishing in Cuba.

Having not had the many years of protection that the Jardines de la Reina, Cayo Largo and the Isle of Youth can boast, South Ana Maria was always intended to be an affordable option for those who want to try out Cuba's exciting and varied flats fishing. While the fishing may not be quite as productive as the more famous locations, it does however have good-quality fishing and the same service levels as the other destinations.

Fly Fisher Group parties in the current season have reported good fishing in South Ana Maria with respectable catches of several bonefish per rod per day up to 7lbs. The area has some resident tarpon up to 30lbs, plus larger migratory ones at certain times of the year. A party returning in July saw plenty of permit up to 20lbs or more.

The great advantage of fishing from a live aboard is that the fishing is close to where the yachts moor. It allows for a flexible schedule with lunches back on the boat, time for a quick snooze and then fishing until late. The menu frequently features snapper that someone in the party has caught and the crew's ability to mix mojitos and daiquiris is much admired and enjoyed.

The live-aboard vessels, such as the new Fleet I and Fleet II, operating in the Jardines de la Reina, still offer the best fishing. Halcon, a 75-foot motor yacht with air-conditioned cabins, can comfortably accommodate a party of six is still a trusted favourite. For those who want to keep costs down, yet still have good fishing and enjoy the operators' same service standards, South Ana Maria may just be the place.

The Bahamas, famed for large bonefish

Evening comfort, Tiamo

Fly Fisher Group IN THE BAHAMAS

There are an enormous number of lodges in the Bahamas from which to choose. Below we have selected one fishing lodge that is suitable for non-fishers and a superbly comfortable, small resort which caters well for those wanting a few days' fishing.

NORTH RIDING POINT

Situated on Grand Bahama, the small fishing lodge of North Riding Point has remained quietly successful. It is beautifully hosted and run by Tim and Mercedes Comstock who have a band of enthusiastic regulars that visit every year. So what is the big attraction?

First, the lodge has beautiful beach front rooms that look out to the sea and a wide expanse of flats beyond. Second, there is some terrific bonefishing to be had.

This is not a destination for shoals of 2lbs to 3lbs schoolies. This is somewhere to catch bones of more meaningful proportions. A 5lbs fish is reasonably standard here but specimens of 7lbs to 9lbs are caught with regularity and, with luck, you may get to cast to one of 10lbs or more.

TIAMO

Tiamo is an unspoilt luxury island hideaway on South Andros with just 10 cottages and one villa. The standard of accommodation, infinity pool, spa facilities, gym and private beach is sure to impress all non-fishers. Tiamo offers flexibility and fishing can be arranged for as many, or as few, days as suit.

On the fishing front, it is possible to access a vast area of flats from Tiamo. These include some favourites, such as the South Bight, the truly picturesque and good wading area of Water Cay and in the north there is the 'Land of Giants' where some of the largest bonefish can be found.

There are three different room categories from which to choose so please ask us for an itinerary.

Beach flat on Los Roques

Bonefish are of good average size

Fly Fisher Group IN VENEZUELA

The island of Los Roques has its own ardent band of followers that return year after year. Why is this still the case with a handful of other countries offering decent flats fishing and countless other bonefishing lodges from which to choose?

Part of the attraction is the island's low-key charm and an unpretentious fishing operation. Accommodation is in a simple, but comfortable, 11-room hotel run by personable staff who cater for content, but exhausted, fishermen who just want, fresh seafood for dinner and a comfortable night.

The main attraction has to be the remarkably reliable and productive fishing. The bonefish are both plentiful and of good average size and seem unfussy when it comes to taking a fly. As well as the bonefish there are barracuda, jacks, snapper and, at certain times of the year, tarpon can be found on the flats.

There are a variety of flats, some are coral and some soft marl covered with turtle grass and seaweed. One of the advantages of Los Roques' beach and sand flats is that they are all wadeable, ensuring that both rods can fish at the same time.

Los Roques remains one of the great value for money offerings in the saltwater world.
